Nasser - Berlin

- The story about the young man Nasser from Berlin shows a good example of when the society's safety system managed to prevent a terrible crime. Nasser is a homosexual young man, who were drugged and kidnapped by his father and other family members, to be killed in Lebanon. The motive was that Nasser had insulted the honour of the family because of his homosexuality.
- What probably saved his life was a travel ban for him issued by the police department in Germany. In this case the society's safety system made a huge difference and the actions that were taken worked out as they should.
